To Whom it May Concern:

I am pleased and honored to recommend Molly Dwyer. Molly's extensive experience and dynamic classroom presence will be of great benefit to students and faculty.

Molly has taken a number of Creative Writing courses through the Community Education courses offered at CRMC, and while I have been officially listed as the instructor in the Thursday morning sessions, it has turned out that Molly and I essentially team teach. Her comments to other students are always insightful, sensitive, and instructive, and I often find myself taking notes when Molly speaks. She is deeply invested in helping every kind of writer find his way with his material, regardless of genre or content, and she possesses an impressive ability to translate theory into accessible lay terms, thereby ensuring student success.

Molly's first novel was published this year and while being an entertaining and engaging read, Requiem for the Author of Frankenstein is another important demonstration of her ability to gracefully traverse the delicate edge between abstract concepts and everyday reality—a quality essential for any English instructor. Molly's accomplishments, both creatively and critically, reveal not only her passion for the English language, but also demonstrate a professional who understands the power of the written word to transform students into creative and critical thinkers. Her classroom will be one of true learning.

As a community member, Molly has also made important contributions. She has professionalized the web presence of the Mendocino Arts Center and diligently included the literary arts as a vibrant part of the artistic landscape of the Mendocino County. She regularly attends events sponsored by the Mendocino Coast Writers Conference, continuing her education in every venue possible within and without the Mendocino Coast.

Our campus would be greatly enhanced if Molly Dwyer joined the associate faculty. Her contributions would be powerful, important and lasting.

Sincerely,

Charlotte Gullick
